The Mighty Haag Railroad Shows have the only orchestra in America today. The orchestra was originally brought to this country by the German government to place in the German exhibit at the Jamestown Exposition, and as the exposition did not prove successful, the orchestra was never used, and after several attempts Mr. Hagg was fortunate enough to secure it, and then only to use it for this season, and it returns to Wurtemberg, Germany, after the close of the present season with The Mighty Haag Shows.

INJURIES FATAL TO YOUNG MAN

Wilbur Creager, Promising Young Man of Fairfield, Dies in Hagerstown Injuries Received when Struck by Engine.

Fairfield, May 11—J. Wilbur Creager died at the Western Maryland hospital at Hagerstown, Tuesday evening as a result of the railroad accident at Cherry Run on April 18th, mention of which was made in these columns at the time. His parents who were telephoned for on Sunday were with him when the end came.

Mr. Creager was taking the numbers of cars in the yards at Cherry Run when he was struck by a Baltimore and Ohio shifting engine. He was taken to the Hagerstown hospital where he seemed to be improving but became worse on Sunday, death following Tuesday evening. He was aged 20 years, 2 months and 27 days.

It is with deep regret that we chronicle the death of one so young, who was a favorite in this community. He was a young man of much promise and lived an honest, upright Christian life and will ever be remembered by his many friends for his noble character. While in the hospital, although he suffered intensely at times, he was cheerful and patient.

EIGHT KINGS WILL HONOR EDWARD

European Rulers Will Attend His Funeral.

LONDON AGAIN NORMAL

An Imposing Military Pageant Will Mark Removal of King's Body From Buckingham Palace to Westminster Hall.

London, May 11.—The king held a privy council at which the question of a special memorial service to Edward VII was considered.

It is now known that seven kings besides George V. will attend the funeral of Edward VII. They are:

William, emperor of Germany and king of Prussia.

Frederick VIII. of Denmark.

King Haakon VII. of Norway.

King Alfonso XIII. of Spain.

King Manuel II. of Portugal.

King Albert of Belgium.

King George I. of Greece.

Mourn a Relative.

Frederick of Denmark is King Edward's brother-in-law. The kaiser is the late king's nephew, his mother having been a sister of his majesty. The king of Norway is a son of a brother of the Queen Mother Alexandra. King Alfonso of Spain is married to a daughter of Princess Beatrice, sister of the late king. King George of Greece is a brother to Queen Alexandra. King Albert of Belgium is a nephew of the late Leopold II, who was an uncle of Victoria, King Edward's mother.

Other mourners will be the queen of Norway, the Archduke Ferdinand, representing the emperor of Austria; the Dowager Empress Marie Feodorovna and the Grand Duke Michael, representing the czar, and the Duke of Aosta, who will represent the king of Italy.

The city is again assuming a comparatively normal aspect. Except for the appearance of mourning emblems along the streets, the fluttering of flags at half mast and the drawn blinds at the leading club houses and in the government offices, a stranger visiting London would find little outward evidence of the momentous occurrences which have attracted the attention of the world within the past three days.

Contrary to the original intention that the body of King Edward should be quietly and privately removed from Buckingham palace to Westminster hall on next Tuesday, it has now been decided that the removal shall be accompanied with considerable ceremonial, and the cortège will be an imposing military spectacle.

Alexandra is Thankful.

The queen mother, Alexandra, has addressed the following letter to the nation:

"From the depths of my poor broken heart I wish to express to the whole nation and our own kind people we love so well, my deep thanks for all their touching sympathy in my overwhelming sorrow and unspeakable anguish. Not alone have I lost everything in him, my beloved husband, but the nation, too, has suffered an irreparable loss by the death of their best friend, father and sovereign, thus suddenly called away. May God give us all his divine help to bear this heaviest of crosses which he has seen fit to lay upon us. His will be done. Give me a thought in your prayers which will comfort and sustain me in all I have to go through. Let me take this opportunity of expressing my heartfelt thanks for all the touching letters and tokens of sympathy I have received from all classes, high and low, rich and poor, which are so numerous that I fear it will be impossible for me to ever thank everybody individually.

"I confide my dear son to your care, who I know will follow in his dear father's footsteps, begging you to show him the same loyalty and devotion you showed his dear father. I know both my dear son and daughter-in-law will do their utmost to merit and keep it."

CROPS COST FARMERS MORE

Increased Price of Foodstuffs Rise With Land Values.

Washington, May 11.—In an effort to prove that the farmer is not reaping the benefits of the high cost of foodstuffs, John H. Shepperd, dean of the North Dakota Agricultural college, at Fargo, gave some expert testimony before the special investigating committee of the senate. His figures were based upon a comparison of present day values with ten years ago.

He admitted that land had increased in value 150 per cent. and claimed that the producing capacity had decreased 20 per cent. The retail prices of agricultural machinery had advanced 19 per cent. and labor 60 per cent. As the price of labor advances the efficiency decreases, he said.

Finally Mr. Shepperd said that $1 wheat today was worth no more than was 80-cent wheat ten years ago.

Recovers Sight on 85th Birthday.

San Francisco, May 11.—Coincident with the celebration of his eighty-fifth birthday, Professor George Davidson, scientist and author, recovered his sight. For almost a year he has been totally blind because of a cataract. He was operated on recently.

There is probably no type of farming or ranching that is more remunerative or accompanied with less risk one year with another than the growing of alfalfa. Especially is this true in and near sections whose area is largely devoted to some other purpose, as, for instance, fruit raising, for uniformly high prices can be secured for the hay owing to the limited supply raised. Here is a fine opportunity for many an energetic fellow who likes farming but doesn't like to put up with the exacting care which the raising of fruit entails.

His Conversion

By EDGAR FALES MOODY

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

Some years ago I visited the far west, passing through a region that had been infested by the worst element of society.

I put up one night at the house of John Murphy, a sheep raiser. His ranch house was not large, but comfortable, and its decorations showed evidence of refinement. His wife was a woman who impressed me as one having considerable equanimity and character. After supper I went out on the porch to have a smoke with Murphy and listened with interest to his account of the building up of his region. During our conversation I stated the opinion that men were what women made them. Then he told me his story.

"You're dead right, stranger," he said, "and I'm one of the men that has been made by a woman. When I came to this country it was from an eastern city, and my education was derived from the dime novel. I was a wulf, with no father or mother to instill into me the fact that however brave the road agents and others of whom I read they were acting on a wrong principle. As it was, I admired them, and almost before I became a man I scraped up enough money to bring me out here to live the life of my heroes of the dime novel.

"I soon got to be a head man among them and for eight years lived a life that I would give anything I have to forget. I have to be thankful for only one thing. During that frightful period I never took a life. I didn't accumulate any money, and if I had I should later on have got rid of it.

"One evening I stopped at a house and knocked at the door. I intended to ask for some supper, expecting once inside to get my bearings for valuables and take them away with me. I had started in with the intention of confining my operations to stage-coaches, army paymasters and the like, but man is always going either uphill or downhill, and as I was necessarily going down I wasn't above taking anything I could get my hands on, even from a woman.

"A woman came to the door. She was young and fairly good looking. To my request for some supper she gave a smiling assent, asking me to come in and make myself comfortable. She went into the kitchen, and I looked about me. There was a chimney in the room where I was with no fire. I knew a chimney was a favorite place to hide money, and, going to the fire-place, I stooped and looked up. On a projecting brick I saw a small box, which I appropriated and, lifting the cover, saw a lot of bills and loose change. I slipped it all in my pocket and put the box back in the chimney.

"By and by the young woman came in and set a good supper on the table. I ate my fill and when I had finished took out one of the coins I had taken from the box and handed it to her. I had started in with the intention of confining my operations to stage-coaches, army paymasters and the like, but man is always going either uphill or downhill, and as I was necessarily going down I wasn't above taking anything I could get my hands on, even from a woman.

"That was the first lesson in kindness I ever received. At any rate, it was the first that ever took hold of me. When I thought of the contents of the box in my pocket and my offering one of her own coins in payment for her kindness, not the least part of which was the way she offered it, my despicable meanness seemed to shrivel me all up. I couldn't look her in the face.

"'You don't need to go on,' she said. 'We have a spare bed upstairs.'

"I was thinking how I would get the money back in the box in the chimney, and it occurred to me that if I stayed there all night I could slip down in the night and do the job. So I said: 'Thank you, miss. If you don't mind I reckon I will. It'll be a great accommodation to me.'

"'No more than to me. My brother and his wife have gone away for a few days and left me alone with the children. They say that Murphy's gang is operating in the neighborhood, and I wouldn't mind having a man in the house.'

"In that case," I said, "I think I'll sleep on that lounge, and I'll guarantee that no man gets upstairs unless he goes over my dead body."

"I knew two of my men would be along there that night, and I reckoned they'd take in anything by the way. The first thing I did before turning in was to put the money back in the box. When I'd done that I felt the first of a kind of comfort I'd never experienced before. I didn't go to sleep, wanting to be awake if any one called. In the middle of the night my two men, Pete Barnicle and Colorado Bill, did call. I showered bullets everywhere about them except just where they were, and they concluded there must be a whole vigilance committee inside. When they had gone I heard a soft voice call down the stairs:

"Thank you. You go to sleep. I'm in command here."

"And I've been in command here ever since. I married the girl. I didn't confess till shortly before the wedding and have been living here ever since. My wife owned the property, and after I came in her brother's family went off to a ranch they bought farther west."

KAISER GREETS MR. ROOSEVELT

Strenuous Ones Have Their Much Discussed Meeting.

WELCOMED BY ROYAL FAMILY

Entertained at Luncheon by Their Majesties, Who Have a Distinguished Company to Meet the Americans.

Berlin, May 11.—Some 1500 Americans went to meet Roosevelt, but they were not allowed near enough to the station to witness his arrival. Roosevelt and his family, with Ambassador and Mrs. Hill, members of the embassy, General Von Loewenfeld, the foreign secretary; the imperial chancellor and other guests took a special train for the Wild Park station, where royal carriages met them and drove them to the palace at Potsdam.

Greeted by Emperor.

On the steps of the palace the long-looked-for meeting between the kaiser and Roosevelt at last took place. The kaiser was resplendent in the white uniform of a general of the bodyguard, with a glittering brass helmet, surmounted by a silver eagle. Roosevelt was attired in civilian dress, wearing a silk hat and frock coat. The kaiser welcomed him heartily and, preceded by the court chamberlain with a wand, led Roosevelt and his family through what is known as the shell room to the salon beyond, where the empress awaited them with the crown princess and other members of the royal family, court ladies and gentlemen.

After the presentations the empress, the kaiser and the Roosevelt families withdrew to another room, the rest of the guests waiting in the shell room. After a little while the empress and the others returned to the shell room and the court chamberlain then marshaled the company in due order and conducted them to the Jasper gallery for luncheon. Roosevelt taking in the empress and the kaiser Mrs. Roosevelt.

In the long chamber, hung with old masters, with a beautiful view through the French windows of the park, six tables were laid for the company, which numbered about fifty. The two chief tables were in the middle. At one sat the kaiser, with the crown princess on his right and Mrs. Roosevelt on his left. On Mrs. Roosevelt's left was Baron Bethmann-Hollweg, the imperial chancellor. The others at this table were General Von Plessen, Count zu Eulenberg, the American naval attaché; Ambassador Hill, Kermit Roosevelt and General Von Loewenfeld. At the second chief table sat the empress, with the crown prince on her right, and Roosevelt on her left. On Roosevelt's left was the kaiser's young daughter, Princess Victoria Louise. The others at this table were the American military attaché, Ethel Roosevelt, Herr Von Sosen, secretary of foreign affairs; Countess Keller, Prince Solms-Baruth and Mrs. Hill.

Long Talk With Kaiser.

After luncheon, which was informal, no speeches being made, the company went back to the shell room and stood in groups. Now it was that the real meeting of the kaiser and Roosevelt came off. The kaiser drew Roosevelt aside from the others and for thirty or forty minutes they stood conversing, on what none may know, but Roosevelt was much handicapped by extreme hoarseness and a hard cough. Before the conversation ended all the guests, with the exception of the Roosevelts, left. The kaiser then, with an equerry, took the Roosevelts in automobiles to see San Souci palace, a mile away. The empress remained at Potsdam.

A special train was ready at the station, but the Roosevelts came direct to the embassy from Potsdam in automobiles. Here Roosevelt found Commander Robert E. Peary, with whom he had a short talk. He then went to his room, where a couple of throat specialists visited him. They report that Roosevelt is suffering from laryngitis, induced by bronchitis, a common experience of people coming north after being in a tropical climate. They say there is no danger. Roosevelt has only to be careful to get well again in five or six days.

HOUSE PASSES RAILROAD BILL

Vote on Administration Measure 200 to 126.

MERGER AMENDMENT LOST

Republicans Present Solid Front on the Final Vote — Fourteen Democrats Voted For the Bill.

Washington, May 11.—The administration railroad bill, amended in many important particulars, was passed by the house by a vote of 200 to 126. A final effort made to restore section 12, which proposed to legalize mergers, failed. The Republicans voted solidly for the bill, while fourteen Democrats also cast votes in the affirmative.

The tariff agreement clause and the provision permitting railroads to purchase the stock of non-competing transportation companies were the chief features of the measure as reported to the house by the committee on interstate and foreign commerce that were stricken out by the house. In other respects the provisions of the measure, as drafted by Attorney General Wickesham at the instigation of President Taft and later amended in committee, were but slightly changed during its passage through the house.

The sections to provide for the creation of a commerce court were retained with but a few amendments, as were the paragraphs placing limitations upon issues of stock.

Best Bill Ever Passed."

"It is the best bill ever passed by the house," said Mr. Mann, of Illinois, in charge of the measure, immediately after its passage.

After voting on amendments came a motion to recommit the bill. This was defeated by a vote of 157 to 156.

The bill was promptly placed before the house for final action upon various amendments that had been voted upon when the measure was under consideration in the committee of the whole.

The previous question upon the entire measure being ordered, Mr. Mann offered an amendment for the reinsertion of section 12, authorizing the purchase by railroads of the stock of non-competing transportation companies. Mr. Mann explained that as presented by him the amendment was precisely as agreed to in the committee of the whole before being stricken out.

By a vote of 169 to 160 the house defeated the amendment.

This Mann amendment is what has come to be known as "the merger section."

On a roll call the bill was then adopted by a vote of 200 to 126. The announcement of the vote by Speaker Cannon was greeted with applause by the Republicans.

The railroad bill, as it was adopted by the house, is different in some material respects from the measure as originally drafted by the attorney general, and is also different from the bill as it was reported to the house from the committee on interstate and foreign commerce.

Commerce Court Saved.

The chief feature which is retained in the bill as prepared by Mr. Wickesham and for which the president and the administration leaders have contended, is the provision for the establishment of the court of commerce. All efforts to strike this provision from the measure, and the movement to recommit the bill to the committee with instructions to eliminate this feature, were defeated.

There is also contained in the bill as originally drawn the provision for having the decisions of the commission defended in court by the department of justice. This was objected to by the insurgents, who contended that it would weaken the powers of the commission, but is kept in the bill. The capitalization and the stocks and bonds features, as contained in sections 13, 14 and 15, are also retained.

By an amendment the house struck out of the present interstate commerce law the words "under similar circumstances and conditions" in reference to the long and short haul provision. This language has been considered as the "joker" in existing law and which has enabled the railroads to charge more for short than for longer hauls over the same routes and lines in the same direction. The advocates of this amendment believe that it will eliminate railroad discrimination against inland localities and in favor of seaboard towns.

The house also added an amendment providing for the physical valuation of railroads and railroad property. This is an insurgent proposition, but was offered in the house by Representative Madden, a regular, and supported by nine regulars, all the insurgents and the Democrats. It is not contained in the original draft of the bill nor in the senate measure.

The house also added an amendment which makes telegraph and telephone lines common carriers. This is another insurgent amendment which is not in the original bill nor in the senate measure.

CHINA FREES MILLIONS OF SLAVES

Purchase and Sale of Human Beings Prohibited.

Washington, May 11.—The Chinese government by imperial rescript has abolished slavery throughout the empire and has prohibited henceforth the purchase and sale of human beings under any pretext. The retainers of Manchu princes are not emancipated, however, but it is forbidden to call them slaves. They have long enjoyed educational and other privileges. The household slaves of the Manchus also refused emancipation, but the status under the law is improved.

Under this rescript the immemorial practice of selling children in China in times of famine is abolished, although they may be bound for a specified term, but never beyond the age of twenty-five years.

Concupinage is still to be permitted, but there is to be no bargain and sale.

Such concubines are to be married with proper legal formalities, and they will enjoy the protection of the law, but in reality they will be no better than perpetual slaves to the principal wife.

The rescript is said to be a compromise measure, but it will eventually give freedom to millions of human beings.

BOY STILL GONE

Fear Young Lee, of Atlantic City, Has Been Kidnapped.

Atlantic City, May 11.—Declaring that arrests would be made inside of twenty-four hours, County Detective Baetzel intimated that more than one man may have been implicated in the kidnapping of fourteen-year-old Harry Lee, who has been missing from his parents' home in English Creek for more than a week. When last seen the boy was in the company of Lewis Austin in this city. Baetzel refused to name the men under suspicion, but said that they would probably only be held as witnesses. It is now believed that the boy may have been a victim of a plot to secure revenge on Albert Lee, his father, and Detective Baetzel spent several hours quizzing the parents to secure names of possible enemies.

Besides being an oyster planter, the elder Lee is a dealer in lumber, but declared that he had no business enemies and that he had never been engaged in any of the county oyster bed wars which might have made him an object of revenge.

Killed as Family Looked On.

Chicago, May 11.—Before the eyes of her husband and two sons, Mrs. Albert Behr, wife of Albert Behr, a wealthy contractor, was run down by a party of "joy riders" in a large touring car at Eugenie and Wells streets and instantly killed. The woman's head was severed from her body. No clew to the identity of the occupants of the machine was obtained by the police.

A GENTLE REMINDER.

Do you remember that day at grandpa's? You stole a whole peck of rich ginger-snaps And picked the lock on the old spring house door And drank all the cream from the crocks on the floor?

But, oh, didn't you get an awful big pain And yell like an injun again and again? But, say, didn't you yell an awful lot When grandma clapped on that big mustard plaster?

And do you remember that rank rotten egg You dropped down the neck of good Willy Peegg?

And when it went off like a thirteen inch gun You thought you were having an ocean of fun?

But, oh, didn't the teacher yank you by the ears? And kick you until your good pants were a wreck?

And when you got home your pap put you through.

And Billy Peegg's pap paddled you too.

Say, do you remember the Sunday you went

Unto the old church on deviltry bent?

For under your coat to the house of the blast?

You carried a corked redhot hornets' nest.

And when from that nest you pulled out the bung?

Great Scott, how those baldheaded devils got stung!

I laughed till I thought I would cough up a lung.

While you skipped the town for fear you'd get hung.

But these are but a few tricks that you did.

When playing the dickens while you were a kid.

And I now remind you amid family joys Of that saying of old, "Boys will be boys."

IRON SPRINGS

By ESTELLE MARSH

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

"Dick," said his aunt, "I think you are making a mistake in not marrying Jenny now. Start in with what you have and it will grow."

Dick Laramore was very much impressed with his aunt's advice. He talked with Jenny about it, and they agreed that they would make a beginning at once. Together they could raise $75, and they knew of a cottage they could get for $20 a month. They fixed a date for their wedding and began to hunt for furniture that they could pick up at small cost.

One day Dick heard of an auction sale of household goods that was to take place in a neighboring village and concluded to go over and see if he could get anything that would help him and Jenny at their housekeeping. He bought a dining table for $4 and a sideboard for $6. Among other things put up for sale was a basket full of shells, eggs and other oddities. Dick had always taken great interest in curious things and had quite a collection of old dirk knives, bits of uncommon metals, shells and other articles. There were two large eggs in the basket he saw at the auction that excited his curiosity. He had never seen eggs of that size or shape. He forgot for the time being that he needed furniture and began to bid on the basket of curios. An old woman seemed to covet them and bid against him till she had raised her offer to $7. Dick bid $7.25, and the basket was knocked down to him.

That brought him to his senses. He had invested about one tenth of all he had to spend for furniture in a basket of worthless trinkets. He was so disgusted with himself that he left the auction and drove home.

The boldest thing he had ever thus far done was facing Jenny, showing her, among his purchases, the basket of knickknacks.

"Why, Dick!" she exclaimed when she saw the latter.

Dick hung his head.

"They'll make a nice ornament for our sitting room," said the girl, seeing by Dick's rueful appearance that he regretted his purchase as much as she did, and, putting her arms around his neck, she gave him a kiss.

"What big eggs those are!" she said.

"What bird laid them?"

"I don't know," said Dick, "and I don't care."

"We'll ask Professor Drummond."

Jenny showed Professor Drummond the eggs, and he pronounced them auk's eggs.

"What's an auk?" asked Jenny.

"Alcidæ—swimming birds with a pointed bill, very short wings and legs placed very far back. Penguins belong to the alcidæ family. I'm not sure," he continued, examining the eggs critically, "but these are eggs of the great auk."

"Is the great auk superior to the rest?" asked Jenny.

"In one respect. They are extremely rare. Indeed, I think they are extinct."

"If they are extinct how came these eggs to be in existence?"

"They must have been procured before the bird's extinction. At any rate, they are great curiosities. They must be very valuable."

Jenny's heart leaped for joy. Perhaps they could sell them for what Dick gave for them. This would relieve his mind, and they could buy some kitchen utensils she needed.

"Do you think, professor?" she asked.

"That we could get as much as $7.25 for them?"

The professor smiled. "If they are great auk's eggs," he replied, "you can get more than hundred times $7.25."

Jenny opened her eyes.

"I would advise you to put them away carefully. I will bring Professor Wilson, the naturalist, to see them. He will settle the question whether they are great auk's eggs or not."

Jenny put the eggs away. It was all she could do to keep from telling Dick what the professor had said, but she shrank from raising her lover's expectations to have them blighted, so she kept her secret, and the next day the two professors called, looked at the eggs, and Professor Wilson pronounced the eggs those of the great auk. He gave their value at about a thousand dollars each. He agreed to send a man who would offer for them all they were worth except a fair profit.

Jenny kept her secret in fine style though she said, "Heaven knows what a struggle I have to do so!" One night when Dick came to see her she said to him:

"Dick, you know what a poor business man you showed yourself in buying that basket of trinkets."

"Please bury that matter."

"Well, since you were so stupid as to buy those things I think I had better sell them for you. I've sold the two big eggs already."

"Sold them?"

"Yes. I got a good price for them."

"How much?"

"Two thousand dollars."

"Stop your nonsense and tell me."

Jenny drew a check for $2,000 and tried to show it to him, but her feelings overcame her, and, throwing her arms around his neck, he could see nothing at all.

They spent the rest of the evening locked in each other's arms and planning what they would do with their wealth.
